

The Border Dilemma: Ethics and Politics of Immigration

Benjamin Boudou

EHESS Editions, 2018

Table of contents

INTRODUCTION

The place of the political
A need for theory
Legitimacy at the borders
Facts, values, norms

PART I. THE PROBLEM OF BORDERS

1. Mobilizing theory

Should political theory be useful?
Eliminating false dichotomies
The heuristic and pedagogical functions of theory
The critical and ethical functions of theory

2. Conceptualizing borders

Borders force us to think
Spatial or sociological fact?
Fact or value?
The challenge of methodological nationalism

3. The dilemma of the liberal community

Opening and closing
The contractualist fable
The coup de force of law
The liberal paradox

PART II. SOVEREIGNTY, COMMUNITY, IDENTITY

4. In the name of the community: Protecting an identity

The closed moral community
Self-determination
Protectionist nationalism
Objections: The logics of membership and of interiority

5. In the name of the Republic: Promoting the common good

Maintaining a common good
The domination of non-citizens
Towards a cosmopolitical republicanism
Objection: The logic of consent

6. In the name of the institutions: Enforcing rights

The right to free association
The right to property over the institutions
The right to refuse new responsibilities
The right to common ownership of the Earth

PART III. LIBERTY, EQUALITY, HOSPITALITY

7. In the name of hospitality: Responding to emergency

An anachronistic concept?

A theoretical return

A strategic return

Hospitality as a political virtue

8. In the name of liberty: Opening borders

Liberalism and cosmopolitanism

Freedom of movement: The freedom of freedoms

The problem of symmetry between emigration and immigration

Reducing freedom

9. In the name of interests: Democratizing power

Reconstruction of the democratic community

The principle of affected interests

Objections

Qualifying and pluralizing the principle

CONCLUSION: TOWARDS A PARLIAMENT OF MIGRANTS

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

REFERENCES